

Spikes and Raticles keep blocking my attacks. Is there an easier way to jack them?

They block Crash's small punches pretty often, indeed. Your solution? A nice hard kick to the body. Fully charge up your triangle attack (or equivalent on other versions) as soon as you see the Titan block and then let 'im have it. This will knock them out of their block. Chances are, also, that they will start to attack Crash just as soon as the kick is about to connect with them, hurting them either way. Combined with later combos such as the Triple Dragon and the Board Slam and you should knock these Titans down in one, regardless of their blockings.

I can't get the combo king award. Why not?

Some levels require a lot of consecutive combos before you obtain this award for the level. Some even go past the 50s region. The best thing to do is locate an area, in the level, which has a lot of enemies. When you find such a place (there is always one) punch for a brief moment until your combo ends, then quickly spin attack the enemies around and then stop again, before Crash becomes dizzy. If Crash becomes dizzy, you've spun for much too long and must start over. Then repeat the process. As you upgrade the spin attack, the more likely you will be able to achieve Combo King on the levels, since you can spin longer and attack the enemies quickly. Eventually you can upgrade it to an infinite spin attack, which can be used in a cheap way against enemies since you could continue the combo on for a long while before the enemies die. Another easy way of obtaining this award is to attack a Titan with the spin attack, constantly. The spin attack does barely any damage and when used against a Titan can easily rack the combo up to the level you want it.

Sludges are difficult to jack. Any help?

The reason Sludges are difficult to jack are because of their immense range or reach with their stretchy arms. Their attacks deal plenty of damage, too, especially their irritating uppercut move. Your best bet is to nudge yourself into the arena of combat, but literally so that only one notices Crash. Once one spots you, lure it away from the others and once away, start hammering away with attacks. Unfortunately the Sludge recovers quickly from damage, so after every combo or so you will have to press L1 and use Aku Aku as a shield in order to block his oncoming attack. This attack will be his uppercut attack which the Sludge WILL use frequently after every combo or two. Since it deals considerable damage, block it or evade the oncoming attack as best you can. Once you've blocked it, deal another combo or two. Eventually you'll jack the Sludge and you can face all of the others that will undoubtedly come. Use R1 to turn into a sludge pool and slide across the floor. This is great for evading all of their attacks at once as you close in. Next you can uppercut with the attack button and knock them all back. Spamming this may seem cheap, but it's the easiest way to knock other Sludge's down. If lots are in front of you, make sure you use the special attack well - the vomit, in order to take down as many as possible. If you stun another Sludge then make sure you jack it, regardless of if you are already on one. You will gain full Titan health back, a nice amount of mojo from the unjacked Sludge and also the more you jack, the closer you get to unlocking the Sludge skin.

What do skins do?

A common question, this. Skins are unlocked after jacking a certain number of a particular Titan. Once unlocked, you can select to wear it from the episode menu in which the Titan first appeared in. Once you wear the skin, you can use it in any level. If you encounter, say, a Scorporilla and you are wearing the Scorporilla skin, when you attack the Titan it will be stunned in one hit, and yours for the taking.

How do I use the Free Kick I receive at the end of the game?

Lots of people ask this one but the answer is so simple. Press R2. That's the kick. It can stun any Titan in one kick if it connects, regardless of how large it is. Happy kicking!

Is there an easier way of beating Uka Uka?

Not really, but by using Crash Mania's boss guide you will be able to become more adept at beating this really tough boss. Just remember: use Uka to jack the Battler and send some whirlwind his way.

I can't seem to do enough damage to a Titan. Help!

If it's a Goar, or a Shellaphant, or even Scorporilla... that would be why. These Titans require you to jack a different Titan that is generally easier to jack, in order to take them on. Only with another Titan will you be able to inflict significant damage onto the Goar and other tougher Titans. Keep this in mind as you need to for the boss fights.
